Dear Mrs Leigh:

I would like to begin this letter I am writing to you presenting myself. My name is Miguel and, as you could guess, I was born in Spain back in 1991. In the year 2015, I completed my university degree in Computer Engineering at Miguel de Cervantes European University. At the present time, I am developing my professional activity as an analyst web developer in Boream, a small start-up focused on IT consulting and software development.

Three years have passed since my first work experience at St Helens, United Kingdom, as an IT intern responsible of company's networks and applications maintenance. By the time I graduated, I had participated in several internship programs to discover which work environment I could feel more comfortable with but also which professional career I would like to improve. This is how I discovered web development.

It has already been two years since I delivered my first completed web and it has been such an exciting and thrilling period in which I could enhance my abilities and knowledge in both development tools and business growth.

Nevertheless, I would not want to stay behind, as technological future is Big Data and Data Science. Everybody can appreciate how important those ideas can be in our lives as those concepts and the underlying technology will be able to achieve such important things as improving the study of health, optimizing industrial processes or even learning new money investment techniques.

That is my main motivation: not to stay behind and be a part of what is already considered a new industrial revolution. Being at the forefront of technology will be one of the greatest challenges I have ever had. As so, I decided to start a master to specialize in this new technological paradigm.

In that terms, Berkeley is the university that best fits my expectations as it is known to be one of the most leading, multicultural and reliable university. I can safely say that, by the time I would have completed my master degree, not only have I learned, but have discovered and known new ways of thinking and seeing the world thanks to the number of people involved in the good development of life both inside and outside the university.

From my point of view, Berkeley represents the best everything described above; this is why I hope to complete my application and be able to take advantage of each other's experiences to never stop growing.

Sincerely yours,
